Short Bio

Daniela Molinari is a Legal Advisor at IntLaw LLP and an advanced law student at the University of Buenos Aires, with academic interests in corporate and international law.

At IntLaw, Daniela contributes to the firm's international law practice. Her work includes leading and supervising the preparation of written submissions on behalf of States in international and regional proceedings, providing legal analysis and strategic advice, and supporting case strategy, including in connection with hearings. She also contributes to the design and delivery of capacity-building workshops and other IntLaw initiatives. Furthermore, Daniela plays an active role in the coordination and development of the IntLaw Cup.

Through her work at IntLaw, Daniela has also engaged with the broader academic community, including her participation in the centennial symposium hosted by Lund University's Faculty of Law in Sweden, focused on the Law of the Sea. Daniela is also involved in IntLaw's Greatest Hits & Hidden Gems of International Law research project and has further contributed to research endeavors for forthcoming book chapters on international legal issues, including work to be published in the Hague Yearbook of International Law and the Nordic Journal of Human Rights.
